The Trotting Stallion
DIRIGO.
This Horse will be kept the present season as follows:
Mondays, Tuesdays, and Saturdays at W. L. Gilman's stable, Good Hope.
Wednesdays and Thursdays, at Judson Hagar's stable, Palermo.
Fridays at W. Christy's stable, St. Albans.
DIRIGO is sire of more Trotting Colts than any other Horse in Maine, and we have never seen an inferior Colt of his; and many of them are very fast. One colt, Little Red, trotted a race with Dirigo, Jr., on the Fair Ground, Bangor, May 25th, mile heat, 3 minutes in three, against all horses that were on the ground, won in three straight heats—time 2.37, 2.35, 2.32. Nothing better than this was ever done here. Made by Mr. Mason, Dirigo, Jr., is for sale, for gentlemen's use, a most beautiful, high-spirited, and intelligent horse. Will trot a mile in 2.40 (and for his gentleness almost instantly).
Dirigo was purchased in Bath, of Horace Moody, of Monroe, for the sum of seven Thousand Dollars, ($7,000.) He is now owned by the Old Dirigo Horse Club, an association of a thousand citizens. His color is a beautiful dark brown. He was foaled 1858. Stands over 16 hands. It is for the interest of his owner to improve the stock of the County, the terms of service are put very low.
Warrant $25; Season, $20; Single Service, $15.
☞ Good pasturage on the premises for Mares from a distance.

Medical Notice.
CHRONIC CATARRH.
There are hundreds in the city who are at this moment suffering from Chronic Catarrh, and unfortunately many of them who are not aware of the danger to which they are exposed. They sometimes think a severe cold in the head, or bad cough, as to excite little or no attention, and it is allowed to run from one to two months, and then they are surprised to find that it has settled on the lungs, and is developed into Consumption, and then it is too late. Reader, if you would avoid the danger of this terrible disease, do not neglect a cold or catarrh in the head. Know that this catarrh contains the seeds and predisposition of both upper consumption, and unless you cure your cold or catarrh, it will but produce that terrible disease. I published a pamphlet on the subject, by the name of Chronic Catarrh, and sent it free to any one who desired it. Since then I have received thousands of letters from all parts of the country, stating that it has been the means of curing them after all other remedies had failed. I will send this pamphlet with universal success, free of charge, to any one who desires it. Address

Whig & Courier.

JOHN H. LYNDE, - - PROPRIETOR.

FRIDAY, JULY 23, 1869.

State Election, Monday, Sept. 13.

FOR GOVERNOR,

"True Men for Office."

The Portland Advertiser—we hope carelessly and not intentionally—misrepresents the position of the Whig upon the question of appointments as set forth in an article under the above head the other day. It combats us under the mistaken notion that we would have us regard for efficiency, but only for political opinion. Our position was clearly enough stated, and is, that everything else being equal, to go no further, our friends should have the places of trust under the Government. We fairly justified President Lincoln for retaining some Democrats in office before Republicans had sufficient experience. We further stated that one of the strongest points in our case is, that we have the best men in our party with whom to fill the offices.

We do not propose to discuss the question of sustaining our own friends in a party view; every man knows that in this country, great and thoroughly organized national parties are necessary to the better preservation of order in our modes of elections, and every man knows the necessity for certain incentives to labor for success. But let us look at the question from another practical point of view. The Advertiser is a Republican paper; we believe it desires the success of every vital point in our national creed. This, being the fact, what means would it take to establish its views upon the policy of the Government? It would advocate the election of men who think with itself; it would scout the idea of casting votes for men who would denounce its views. Having filled the elective offices to its liking, is its duty done? By no means. The most important offices so far as our financial, diplomatic and commercial interests are concerned, are filled by appointment. Would the Advertiser fill the Treasury offices with men who openly declare for repudiation? Would it send abroad blatant ex-rebels to represent the national honor? Would it regulate our commerce with agents who during the war were cheering on the Alabamas to destroy it? Would such appointments be establishing the theory of sound Government? The very idea of our system is to give the majority the opportunity to carry out its peculiar views. Is there anything wrong in that? If so, our whole elective system is wrong, and our Government is founded in error. If not so, why avoid the responsibility of carrying on the Government according to the policy of the Republican party. The Whig has taken no ground not consistent with honesty and good Government. We have not favored the appointment of incompetents to office. But we cannot see the beauty of that popular hobby upon which certain journals attempt to parade themselves as "independent" reputation—the cry against partisan appointments. A Republican victory with Democratic officers, would be a truly remarkable and admirable arrangement, under which we have no doubt our Democratic friends would waive all claims to a victory at the polls. They would stand in the position of the Southern politician, who, while speaking from the same stand as his antagonist, said: "Gentlemen, I'm an exceedingly modest man. I'm sure of an election, but I'll make this magnanimous offer to my opponent. He may have the honors and I'll take the salary, or I'll take the salary, and he may have the honors!"

We believe in true men for office, and that means honest and capable Republicans.

Vallandigham tries to comfort himself over the nomination of Gen. Rosecrans, in this manner:

"Whether Rosecrans is the best representative of the 'new departure,' is not the question. It is enough to know that, in the necessary troubling of the waters, he was lifted into the pool. In the casting of lots the lots fell upon him. As the representative of the living present, he will receive the cordial support of every live Democrat and live man who has sense enough to realize that the world moves. No one requires or expects to give up his opinions or repudiate his votes in the past."

This is the manner in which the mock-auction concern propose to treat the "new departure" idea. Vallandigham and the other encrusted rebels do not propose to "give up their opinions or repudiate their positions in the past." The liberal minded men who, being upon the skirts of Democracy in the hope of a change of heart, certainly display more hopeful generosity than judgment. Under whatever names or platforms they sail, the same Vallandigham stands out as the figure head, and his principles are the principles of the party.

In another place we give a letter by Hon. N. G. Hichborn upon the subject of improving our facilities for ship-building. Mr. Hichborn is a practical man, and his views deserve attention; but he is in error in attributing the opinion in favor of the early superstructure, in great part, of sails by steam to Mr. Pike. We gave an extract the other day from a London paper to the same effect, and several of the New York papers take the same view. The truth of those views seems likely to receive an early test in this country.

THE FREEDMEN OF MARYLAND FORMING LABOR LEAGUES. The colored men of Maryland have recently been holding meetings to form trades unions and societies for their own protection. While the white mechanics of the State saw no serious objection to working with a colored man while he was a slave, it seems to be quite another thing now that he is free, and emulating the example of some trade organizations in that State, they exclude him from the workshop. This makes their own trade organizations necessary, and in their efforts they are seconded by a large number of the influential people of the State, and by the press, which, in view of the certain adoption of the fifteenth amendment, has suddenly discovered that it is important to conciliate the colored element.

THE COAL TRADE. The Philadelphia Ledger says the anthracite coal trade last week was very heavy, although there was little or no tonnage from the Delaware and Hudson Canal and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Companies. The Schuylkill region is doing its utmost. The total forwarded to market is but 224,000 tons short of last year. This amount must soon be made up, and notwithstanding the policy of restriction to six cars per day for each miner and his assistant, which is now being rigidly enforced by the Workingmen's Benevolent Association, it is probable that before fall there will be a large excess over the production of last year from the whole region, even if the two large companies in the Upper Lackawanna still refusing to let their men resume work, should persevere in their present course. There is an active demand for coal at the East, and the trade is very firm on all its departments at present.

Political and Personal.

The new Democratic war cry—Millions for party votes; not one cent to pay off the national debt.

Mr. Gillespie, the nominee for Governor of the Iowa Democracy, is another very rich man and a carpet-bagger, like Packer of Pennsylvania.

William A. Richardson, formerly Democratic United States Senator from Illinois, declines to be nominated as a delegate for the State Constitutional Convention. He says that his political life is over.

Senator Thurman, of Ohio, will start for California very soon, and he expects to meet General Rosecrans, and officially notify him of his nomination for Governor.

Ex-Senator Buckalew, President of the Democratic Convention at Harrisburg, had his pocket picked of $20 by some light-fingered Democrat, while in attendance.

The Wilmington Journal characterizes it as a "slander" upon the people of North Carolina to say that they were dragged into the rebellion and never gave it a hearty support.

The Richmond Whig says: "We beg the New York World, and all the over-zealous democratic journals to let us alone. What we have done has been done without their aid, and in spite of their opposition. We are more indebted to President Grant than to all the northern democrats put together for our deliverance."

The New York Herald says that there are threatenings of a serious row and fracture in Tammany. The German Democratic element has, within the past few years, grown to almost overwhelming proportions. It feels itself confident of victory in [illegible] insisted it was thick proper to [illegible] account, even against the [illegible] dynasty and power itself. [illegible] propounds says the Herald, [illegible] appearances of a coming [illegible] German Democracy, and [illegible] of the political disabilities [illegible] they may have [illegible] and are preparing a bill of [illegible] demands shall be conceded to [illegible]

It is known [illegible] Democratic candidate [illegible] Governor of Virginia, is elected [illegible] 15,000 majority, instead of [illegible] afford to be defeated. The [illegible] monstrates that he is indebted [illegible] to negro votes. Those [illegible] who propose to make [illegible] the Amendment [illegible] result in Virginia [illegible] the amendment is in [illegible] State. Mr. [illegible] Acceptance.

In reply to [illegible] Committee of the State Convention, informing him of [illegible] for Governor by that body, [illegible] as will be seen in the following letter:

[illegible], July 2, 1869.

Messrs. J. L. [illegible], W. Woods and [illegible], State Temperance Conv.

GENTLEMEN:—[illegible] honor to acknowledge the [illegible] favor of the 29th ult., informing me that the State Temperance Convention in Portland, on the [illegible] nominously nominated me as a candidate supported by the [illegible] for Governor of the State for the ensuing year, and expressing the sentiments contained in the resolutions adopted by the Convention.

Like [illegible] at the present time, when breaking [illegible] and constitutions [illegible] wisely made principles by which [illegible] of Maine are governed, [illegible] First, "We assert [illegible] equal rights, and [illegible] Second, "We recognize [illegible] the public duty of sustaining [illegible] To this proposition [illegible] American is [illegible] public credit [illegible] powerless, [illegible] internal police [illegible] fact, that [illegible] never failing [illegible] energies of [illegible] to be [illegible] ated, a moment [illegible] To accelerate [illegible] of Nation be [illegible] every laborious [illegible]

Further, the [illegible] ur of develop [illegible] State, by the [illegible] islation. [illegible] I trust [illegible] culture, commerce, [illegible] —all of which [illegible] upon the attention [illegible] with unusual [illegible] time.

How long have [illegible] inactivities of our [illegible] looked. And to-day the inquiries [illegible] long neglected, [illegible] aided as it deserves.

Shall the [illegible] useful in build [illegible] be returned to [illegible] utility? Shall [illegible] essential to the [illegible] tained at home, [illegible] Shall bevsilion [illegible] for both States [illegible] shall the sails of [illegible] every ocean? [illegible] power, so ready [illegible] service everywhere?

Shall the railroad [illegible] be so perfected [illegible] all the remotest [illegible] the advantages [illegible] without?

These and kindred [illegible] the moral and [illegible] the State, together [illegible] remembrance of [illegible] who sacrificed that [illegible] are questions, we [illegible] upon the minds of [illegible] tution [illegible]

And for all these [illegible] mon feel that the most [illegible] pital State or nation [illegible] is men; and the greatest destruction [illegible] that can befall any people is the destruction of its manhood. And the surest and swiftest destroyer of nations, how suffered to exist, is the selling and drinking of intoxicating liquors. Impressed with these convictions, the temperance men seek first the salvation of the manhood of the State, feeling that this secured, and all else follows as a natural result. And to this end will they ask the ordinary abolition of traffic in alcoholic liquors as a beverage. This they will seek by all moral means, legal, and police force aided by whatever of the exigencies of the case may require. Practical results they purpose to reach, and certainly by the mildest possible means.

Viewed from these standpoints, I trust temperance men will no longer be charged with entertaining but "one idea." Theirs is a foundation plan not only for the advancement of good, but for the destruction of evil. And here, I trust, they will meet no antagonism from existing political parties. Most assuredly the true men of all parties cannot desire other than the utmost good, and the destruction of whatever lies in its path way.

In this spirit, and to these ends, and these alone, fully appreciating the sacredness involved, in charging myself with the duties of the office to which I am called, and confident of my own ability for the final triumph of the principles at issue, in malice toward none who may differ in opinion with myself; and confidently expecting the sympathy of all from whom I differ, I accept the honor of the nomination tendered; asking upon the whole temperance movement the "considerate judgment of mankind and the gracious favor of Almighty God," as we have peace."

N. G. HICHBORN.

THE NEW POST OFFICE IN NEW YORK. The Post Office Department has determined to proceed with the erection of the new Post Office in New York, and work will be begun in a few weeks. The building will be a splendid structure, and will occupy the lower end of City Hall Park, all effort to change its location having failed. The plan for the exterior of the edifice is as follows:

"The new building is to have four fronts, one of 160 feet, the segment of a circle on the lower point of the Park; one of 375 feet on Broadway, one of 375 feet Park row, and the last of 326 feet 6 inches, facing the City Hall. Its height from its foundation to the top of the roof will be ninety nine feet, while above the roof are to be erected four grand centre pavilions, and for each front. The pavilion at the south front is to be surmounted by a dome, and cupola extending 100 feet above the roof. A large clock will be in this cupola. The other central pavilion will be 100 feet in height, and on all the corners there are to be smaller pavilions of proportionate size and beauty. The site covers twenty-six lots, and, as will be seen from this general description, the building is to be grandly colossal in size as well as splendid and superb in its magnificent proportions. The exterior of this structure is to be of white marble, rusticated, dome columns, and to extend to the peoples of the principal pavilions. The partitions of the second story are to be ornamented with statuary—figures in marble of Justice, Commerce, Industry and others of kindred symbolical significance. Large marble statues of George Washington and Dr. Franklin are to be placed on the columns on either side of the south entrance, designed as commemorative of the former as first President of the United States, and of the latter as the first Postmaster General under the new Republican administration. The edifice will be of the French renaissance style of architecture, and of the most imposing appearance as well as originality of contour and interior arrangement."

The Western Terminus of the French Cable.

Duxbury, the American terminus of the French Atlantic Cable, is fully described together with its surroundings, by the Boston Journal. The place, now small, must grow with the opening of the new line of communication, and the following account of it is interesting.

"The place selected for the western terminus of the cable is at Rouse's Hummock, so called, in the town of Duxbury. This is situated near the Gurnet light at the entrance of Plymouth harbor, and is a direct line to almost one mile and a half from the village, but it cannot be approached within a great ground the beach a distance of five or six miles, unless one feels disposed to cross marshes and rivers, which, in a direct line, intervene between it and the village. The hummock is a conical-shaped hill, and embraces about thirty or forty acres of land, covered with a slight growth of wood. Its highest point is about fifty feet above the level of the ocean, from which a beautiful view of the majestic ocean and surrounding country can be had. The beach at Duxbury is one of the finest in the country, and access to it had been easy would have long since become a popular summer resort. But at the late session of the Massachusetts legislature a charter was granted to private individuals to construct a bridge across from Duxbury village, and it will undoubtedly prove a profitable investment. The cable company have erected a building at the place, to which the ocean cable will be laid.

"As the French Cable Company had not acquired the power from Congress previous to its adjournment to lay and maintain a cable on the shores of the United States, in order not to retard the progress of this great work a charter was granted by the legislature of Massachusetts to the Ocean Telegraph Company, whose line, as does the cable outside the jurisdiction of the United States, only differing in the insignificant fact that might otherwise have occurred. A man will constantly be stationed in the building to guard the cable against danger, and in case of a break it will be tested at this point. But from here a land cable is spliced to it, which is to be laid across the marshes, in a trench constructed for that purpose, where it is conducted to the main office, in the old Bank building at Duxbury village.

"Upon here an independent land line is being constructed to Boston, and it is supposed that one will soon be built to New York. This office will be under the charge of Mr. L. G. Wateon, of New York, the Cendra Superintendent and managing agent of the Company, assisted by R. R. Brown, of London, the manager of the land lines, Mr. M. J. Gaines, formerly Consul for the United States at Tripoli, but who for the past seven or eight years has been engaged in telegraphic service in the Mediterranean, is to be the chief clerk in the office, and a force of about twelve electricians will be required to perform the duties of the cable and land lines.

"The arrival of this cable at Duxbury will no doubt have a tendency to revive its shipping interests, the loss of which has been sadly felt. At one time this town stood among the foremost of the shipbuilding towns of this commonwealth, and the reverse to its interests was experienced during the panic of 1837, seriously affecting many large builders. But its final blow fell in 1842, when the building of large clipper ships commenced. As a suitable quality of timber could not be procured, and there being no railway to Duxbury by which it could be transported, the builders removed to Boston and Medford, where better facilities could be afforded. The want of a railroad has not only experienced the charter branch road to connect with the South Shore road at Cohasset, having been obtained about two years since, and all the towns have taken stock in it to aid its completion, except the town of Scituate, which, seems to be sadly behind the times.

"The steamers which are to convey the section of cable from St. Pierre to Duxbury are expected to arrive about the 25th of the present month, when it is proposed to complete the event by an appropriate demonstration. Although the American people could hardly be supposed to feel the interest that will be produced by the successful laying of the Atlantic Cable, having become accustomed to great improvements and stirring events, yet they cannot but appreciate the additional link in the progress of our country's success."

Dr. Schenck, the proprietor, has made this combination of medicines for the cure of Consumption, and has given them to the public under the belief that they are the best remedies for that disease. Each one of the three is an alterative, but the Pulmonic Syrup is the one which is especially relied on to cure Consumption. The Sea Weed Tonic is taken to prevent the nausea which the Syrup would produce on the stomach, and the Mandrake Pills are taken occasionally to clear the liver when it becomes torpid. Dr. Schenck has been using these remedies in his extensive practice for many years, and knows their value perfectly. He has no doubt that they will cure Consumption, if taken according to his directions, in any case in which the lungs are not entirely disorganized and the patient has strength enough left to rally. Indeed, he has cured many such cases. Dr. Schenck is professionally at his office in Philadelphia every Saturday, where all letters for advice must be addressed. Trial of Yerger.

JACKSON, Mississippi, July 22.

The trial of Yerger before a military commission was concluded today, but the verdict is not known.

After the trial was concluded, Yerger was brought before Judge Hill, of the United States Circuit Court, on a writ of habeas corpus.

Judge William Yerger, in behalf of the prisoner, submitted a plea, to which the Judge Advocate, Col. Thomas F. Bass, submitted a return, and Yerger was remanded to military custody.

The points involved having heretofore been passed upon by Judge Hill with the same result, the case will next be heard from in the Supreme Court.

The State Agricultural College.

The editor of the Maine Farmer has been giving some observations of the institution, calculated to interest the people in the benefits of a more thorough education to the chief source of revenue to our State. We copy the portion of one of the articles more particularly bearing upon the present course of the College and the obstacles to its future success:

The course of study for the second year has not as yet been definitely arranged, and the schedule below furnishes an outline of the same that may be subject to some modifications, in the main, however, we presume it will very nearly in accordance with the course as it will be announced by the management of the Institution in their official circular: First Term—Geometry, completed; Botany, analysis and study of all the orders; Drainage; Chemical Physics; Rhetoric. Second Term—Trigonometry; Mensuration; French; Dairy Farming (with lectures); General Chemistry (with lectures); Rhetoric. Third Term—Surveying and Navigation; Elements of Agriculture; French; Mechanical Cultivation of Soils, Manures, &c.; Analytical Chemistry; Rhetoric. In addition literary exercises will be maintained throughout the year (as they have during the past year) and lectures will also be given upon sound, heat, light, electricity, chemistry, dairy farming and practical agriculture. Military science and practice will be attended to for a part of the year, or throughout the entire year as may be deemed best.

For the second Freshman class more than twenty applications have already been received, and while they will be somewhat cramped for room, the Trustees are still determined to provide the best accommodations possible under the circumstances for all that may make applications. Arrangements can be made in Prof. Fernald's house (known as the Frost house) for four students, and if necessary the large room in the new Dormitory can be made to contain two students each; so that with an inconvenience that can be put up with for a while, a class of twenty-five students can be accommodated in the two buildings.

There is much of the present condition of the Institution, its operations during the past year, and its prospects so far as they depend upon the teachers, &c., are concerned for the year to come. And yet, all the work of the Trustees, all plans for the improvement and greater efficiency of the College, all building operations are completely suspended. And why is it?

The State College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts" was located at Orono upon condition that the town would give a suitable farm, and friends of the institution the $15,000 towards providing the necessary buildings. If we rightly understand the matter, the town of Orono gave $8,000, Old town $3000, and citizens in Bangor and vicinity made up a subscription of about $14,000, some $13,000 of which was paid. The sums so contributed by the towns of Orono and Oldtown went to purchase the farms upon which the college is located, the town of Orono having the largest interest in the same holding the title thereof in their own name, by the provisions of which all improvements placed upon the farm revert to the town in case the location of the college should be changed.

Towards the erection of the requisite buildings, (for which purpose no part of the sum received from the sale of the land scrip can be appropriated,) the interest of that being used for purposes of instruction only) the State has made two appropriations, one of $10,000, and one of $20,000, so that with the sum donated, upwards of $40,000 have already been expended. With the interest both bounds upon the farm have been thoroughly repaired, one completely rebuilt and greatly enlarged, the Dormitory erected, and the Laboratory building—an exact model of that at Brown University, at Providence, R. I. which is considered as the most planned building of its kind in the United States—finished in its exterior. These improvements consumed the sums appropriated and the Trustees asked of the last Legislature an additional appropriation to enable them to complete the Laboratory and inaugurate other much needed requirements. The Legislature made an appropriation of $8,000. This liberal sum would have enabled the Trustees to carry on their work of improvement which the necessities and demands of the college rendered so imperative; but, although the money is in the Treasury waiting the order of the Trustees, not a dollar of it can be obtained. Simply because the action of the town of Orono, the town where the college is located, the town that is to receive a large share of the benefit of its location, the town that of all others should be most for its success, thwarts the action of the Legislature, and completely puts a stop to the operations of the very institution it did so much to call into existence. The last appropriation of the Legislature was made upon the condition that the town of Orono should give a deed of the College farm to the State. This it has refused to do, and in consequence of this refusal all work upon the buildings has been suspended, and the Trustees are unable to proceed with the work of improvement.

Now we do not propose to enter into the merits of the question which has arisen between the town of Orono and the Trustees of the College, but we do say that the action of the town is unjust to the College, and that it is a shame and disgrace to the town that the College should be thus crippled. The College is the property of the State, and the town of Orono has no more right to refuse a deed of the land upon which the College is located than it has to refuse a deed of the land upon which the Court House is located. The College is the property of the State, and the town of Orono has no more right to refuse a deed of the land upon which the College is located than it has to refuse a deed of the land upon which the Court House is located. The College is the property of the State, and the town of Orono has no more right to refuse a deed of the land upon which the College is located than it has to refuse a deed of the land upon which the Court House is located.

Now we do not propose to enter into the merits of the question which has arisen between the town of Orono and the Trustees of the College, but we do say that the action of the town is unjust to the College, and that it is a shame and disgrace to the town that the College should be thus crippled

Summer Eve.

Fair Summer Eve! sweet as the parting
To parched lips, amid Arabian sand!
Calm as the silent echoes of a dream,
That waits the exile to his native land.

Kind Summer Eve! life's hard realities
Are melted by thy spirit soothing breath
The stricken heart forgets its bitterness,
The dying dreams not loneliness of death.

Cool Summer Eve! Thy gentle murmuring,
Tell me of happy moments, ever fled,
Nor heed the stubborn course of Saturn's wing,
But dress the footsteps of the past to tread.

Sweet Summer Eve! I've sat and watched thee
And one by one the world starlets shine,
Celestial pirate of her glistening eyes,
Whose loving hand was fondly clasped in mine.

Dear Summer Eve! we sat and watched thee
From twilight hours into shades of night,
Nor wrecked how fast the happy hours coursed
When love had lent their pinions to their flight.

Still Summer Eve! thou hast many a tale
Kin would I, lingering, hearken yet to thee
Of former days, though other loves may fail
A welcome thou wilt ever meet from me.

Clerical Anecdotes

Dr. Elliot, a noted clergyman of Connecticut town being 'well-to-do,' and keeping neither books nor bolts on his possessions, was frequently visited by thieves in a small way.

Coming home late one night from a visit to a poor patient, he heard, on passing through his kitchen, a strange awkward noise in his cellar, 'soon followed by a sound of a stealthy steps,' coming up the stairs. Hiding behind the door he saw emerge a tall man, bodding down a large basket, filled with salt pork, just cut up, dripping from the brine.

The doctor recognized a poor neighbor, and stepping forward, said kindly: 'You have a heavy load there. Allow me to help you.'

With a cry of dismay, the culprit dropped the basket, and actually fell upon his knees, entreating forgiveness, declaring that this was the first offense, and that his family were suffering from want of food.

'But, my friend' said the good doctor, 'you certainly knew you had only to come to me and ask for help to get it, without damaging your soul with sin and your coat with brine. I forgive you, but I think you have taken more than your share of pork. I will divide this with you, and when you want more, or any other, come and tell me.'

And again, the almost frantic remonstrances of the poor wretch, he told him to take just one half of the stolen meat, saying: 'Carry it to your wife with my compliments.'

Dr. Elliot never revealed the name of this man, though he enjoyed telling the story; as he did one similar, which is well worth preserving.

One dark night, he went for his horse to the barn, which was some distance from the house, so as to wake about the premises. Hearing some one coming, he immediately concealed himself behind a large bush in the lane, hiding the lantern under his cloak. Presently the door opened, and a man appeared, bending beneath an immense load of hay bound together by a rope. Through locks of this top he had thrust his arms, and he carried the huge mass like a pedlar. The Doctor suffered this thieving Atlas to pass him, then, taking the candle from the lantern, he crept softly forward and fired it to the hay, then concealed himself. In a moment that moving hay-cock was one great blaze, and the thief, with a howl, from his back and shoulders, succeeded in extricating himself with a leap, and then ran as though pursued by fiends across the snowy fields.

Some months after this there came to the Doctor a pale thin man; who after much painful hesitation, expressed a wish to make a confession of sin. With a serious manner, yet with, I suspect, a twinkle in his eye, the minister set himself to listen.

'I've had a dreadful load on my conscience, Doctor, for a spell; and it's a success as if'would lift me.

'Ah! is it possible? What can you have done? You are a respectable man! and a church member,' replied the Doctor, in seeming surprise.

'Yes, I find the church thirty years ago,' replied the old farmer; then, sinking his voice to an awesome, confidential tone, he continued: 'But I'm a dreadful sinner for all that, Doctor; and, bein' a church member, my sin, you see, was of a much account to be winked at, and judgment followed close after it.'

'Pray tell me your trouble.'

'Well, Doctor, it concerns you.'

'Indeed!'

'Yis. One time, last winter, I got a little short of fodder, and I thought to myself how you had more'n enough for your critters, and so one night the Devil tempted me to go over to your barn, and—Dr. G.?'

'So help yourself to a little hay, did you?'

'Yis just so. But I never got home with that ere hay. The Lord wouldn't let me have it. I had a loadon my back, when all at once it burst into a blaze—about my ears.'

'Struck by lightning?'

'No, Doctor, it was a clear night. I'm sure to my mind that fire dropped from Heaven and kindled that ere hay. 'Twas a judgement an' I'm afraid a sort of foretaster of the flames of Hell. I thought last night I felt a little better of I'd just own up to you, and ask your pardon and your prayers.'

To the astonishment of the poor penitent, the minister laughed outright. Then he said, 'Be comforted neighbor; your little thieving operation was hardly of such consequence to Heaven as all that. It was I who caught you at it, and set fire to the hay from my lantern; and I must say you yelled lustily and ran briskly, for a man of your years. Now go home in peace, go well and steal no more.'

'You, Doctor, You? Be you sartin sure you got fire to that hay?'

'Yes, quite sure; that was my own little bonfire. I hope it didn't scorch you much. I noticed when you came to meeting the next Sunday, that your hair was a little singed. As for the flames of hell, neighbor, that is your own lookout.'

'So, so! 'twas you did it all. The Lord be praised!' exclaimed the farmer fervently. 'It's rarely an amazin' relief and joy an old woman was right for she hed go to minister and confess' says she. And so you did it.—Well, folks say you are a master man for a joke; but this one was more solemn than a sermon to me, and more effectual, Doctor, I do believe.'

Soliloquizing, the farmer departed in peace and the parson kept the secret of his own family, always I think.
